

One Good Turn Deserves Another

Although located so near the great metropolis, it is a good half hour ride on the street car to the big shopping centers of San Francisco. Among the thousands of traders crowding the markets and stores of its large commercial areas, one customer's personality and individual problems are not outstanding among so many and soon are lost sight of in the bustling throng.

Here in Daly City we know our merchants and they know us. "Some attractive house dresses just came in, Mrs. B. and several are of your size and favorite color."

"Yes, Mr. F., your wife ordered a melon for this evening, and its on ice now."

"We'll install the radio for you, this afternoon, Mrs. L."

We like these accommodations, and one finds many similar situations among our home merchants in dealing with our citizens.

Our community stores carry almost everything and are always glad to order specially for our needs, when necessary. We depend on them and they depend on us.

Byrne Radio Stores have always served our people well and will continue the same cheerful and efficient service at their new store at 6241 Mission street. Progress in business means development for Daly City. Not only does Mr. Byrne sell radios, but he also carries a large stock of washing machines, ironers, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, electric ironers, electric clocks and anything of similar nature he doesn't have on display he will gladly order for you.

Call at his new store and see for yourself the interesting line of electrical appliances, and, incidentally, you might be interested in the Ironing School, which offers instruction at the new stores for one week commencing June 22. The address is 6241 Mission street.

PEDESTRIAN IS KILLED WHEN RUN DOWN BY AUTO

Colma Man Dies Within Few Hours After Accident On Highway

From the results of internal injuries received when struck by an automobile as he was crossing Junipero Serra boulevard at School street early Sunday morning, Charles Malatesta succumbed to his hurts at the Villa Sanatorium a few hours after the accident.

William Thein, 58, of Redwood City, driver of the machine which struck Malatesta, was arrested by Daly City police immediately after the accident. Charged with reckless driving, he was released on $500 bail.

Thein claimed Malatesta was carrying a whisky bottle in his hand when struck, Coroner Crosby said, but police were unable to locate any bottle near the scene.

Malatesta, who lived on Eighty-eighth avenue, Colma, leaves a widow, Mrs. Josephine Malatesta, and two sons.

DALY CITY WILL PLAY AT MODESTO

Second Half Of The State League Season Will Open Sunday

Sunday will see the opening game of the second half of the State Baseball League season, with the Daly City Tanforans playing at Modesto.

The home team lost a number of "hard luck" games during the first half, otherwise would have finished farther up in the standings. With a few "breaks" they will do better.

With the acquisition of new players the team will be considerably strengthened. Bill Kirby, who did such an excellent job of third basing for the home club last year in Peninsula League, will be with the boys and has been assigned to the second base position. "Doc" Jacobson will cover the outer garden in left field. He is considered a fine fly hawk and is a good hitter and fast on his feet. The batting order has been somewhat revised and these changes should prove of benefit. The old standbys will be in the points for the team, with Manager Ray Volkman on the receiving end and Bill Sturtevant serving up the slants.

RODEO SILVER ANNIVERSARY AT SALINAS SHOW

California Finest Outdoor Girl Will Be Awarded A Trip To Alaska

With a featured new attraction, the Salinas handicap with an $1100 purse, horse racing will be one of the main features at the silver anniversary of the California Rodeo at Salinas, July 16 to 19. The Salinas handicap will be run on Friday, July 17, the second day of the rodeo.

Interesting to all California will be the selection of the state's finest outdoor girl, which will be made on Thursday, July 16. She will be chosen from among a group of high school girl representatives of each county in the state, and to the winner will be awarded a trip to Alaska. A ruling has recently been made that in high school districts where the public school department does not make the selection of an entrant for the finest outdoor girl contest, the Chamber of Commerce may select either a high school junior or senior from either a public or private school. If she wins the county contest, she will then be eligible to compete in the finals at Salinas.

County champions will be royally entertained before the rodeo. On Tuesday noon, July 14, the San Francisco Rotary Club will entertain them at luncheon at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco and the girls will tell of the wonders of their home counties. Later they will broadcast over KPO of the National Broadcasting Company and will be guests at the Clift Hotel at tea.

In addition to the rodeo events, the Salinas show holds unusual interest for horsemen and cattlemen. The daily horse parade, with more than 800 stock horses, and the display of remount stallions from 11 western states, plus fine displays of various breeds of beef cattle, assures the attendance of stockmen.

Wit and humor at the silver anniversary show will be supplied by Homer Holcomb world's champion rodeo clown, and Abe Lefton, premier announcer, who add a lighter touch to the thrills provided in the arena by the bronc and bull riding, steer decorating and wrestling and roping.

MOTOR CRASH CAUSES INJURY TO FOUR PERSONS

Daly City Pair Among Those Hurt In Accident Near Mountain View

On Friday evening Mrs. Nece received a telegram from Seattle telling of the death of her father, who passed away suddenly from a heart attack on that day.

Mr. and Mrs. Nece and son and Leonard McKee left immediately for the northern city, Mrs. Federspiel remaining until Thursday of this week, when she left by train for her home.

Leonard McKee will spend several weeks visiting with Captain and Mrs. Raymond at Fort Lewis, Wash., and the Federspiel family in Seattle before returning home.

EXPO MAPS WELCOME FOR VETS

There are four red letter days in June for California veterans, according to Queen Tanya of the Nudist Colony at the San Diego Exposition, shown above. The long-awaited bonus was paid on June 15 and 16, and thousands of Pacific Coast veterans will celebrate American Legion Days at the World's Fair on June 27 and 28.

LEGIONNAIRES TO HAVE BIG DAYS AT EXPOSITION

Will Put On Parades, Drills And Numerous Other Forms of Entertainment

Posts in all section of the state are co-operating with Exposition executives to make the two-day celebration "the largest yet." Auxiliaries of various posts are vying with the men to set a record not alone in attendance, but in active participation of the days programs.

These will be highlighted by an illuminated parade on Saturday night, June 27, by the 40 and 8; a regulation Legion parade on Sunday. Drill teams, drum and bugle corps, a pageant by women and other events are scheduled.

PREPARED FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF VISITORS

Tourists From East Are to Hear Free Programs At Exposition

With a program of free entertainment recruited from the world's best talent, the California International Exposition at San Diego is ready to entertain the vacationists of America.

Spending many thousand dollars, officials continued to book theatrical events of the first calibre, drawing on the leading producers of New York and Hollywood. Performances which, if seen in the east, would cost an average of $4 admission for each of the separate shows are being given free on the world's fair grounds.

During the coming summer months, including June, it is planned, in addition to regular theatrical attractions, to have the symphony orchestras from various Pacific Coast cities, such as Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and others.

"The Exposition, a brand new show this year, is offering this free entertainment in the hope of attracting the vacationists to the fair," Mr. Dailard said. "The community, as a separate attraction, has what vacationists seek; it has the beaches, the mountains, ideal climate for a summer rest. In addition it has, this year, the Exposition."

"Instructions have gone out to the personnel of the world's fair to extend vacationists every possible courtesy."

"Information desks on the grounds are equipped to aid such travellers in their plans for a happy sojourn. More important than all, however, is the entertainment we plan for them during June, July and August."

"The Exposition wants the vacationists in 1936; we're prepared to show them a real time."

San Diego hotels and apartment houses, it also was announced, have not altered their moderate rates during the Exposition and we are prepared to accommodate the huge summer crowds.

DRUIDS HONOR LOCAL WOMAN

Hillcrest Circle No. 143, United Ancient Order of Druids, was highly honored this week at the Druids' state convention held in San Jose in San Jose when Madeline Fellows, a charter member and first Arch Druidess of this Circle, was elected Grand Guardian of the Grand Circle. Mrs. Fellows has long been a member of the order and the Circle is proud of her.

Delegates from this Circle attending the convention were Marcia Trier, Catherine Foreman, Edith Jacomet, Elsie Figone, and Madeline Fellows as a Grand Officer.

Several members attended the installation of the Grand Officers held on Thursday evening.

TANFORAN FUTURITY IS OF HIGH PROMISE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

With the mailing of entry blanks for the Tanforan Futurity another step has been taken in the advancement of racing right here at home. The Tanforan Futurity, as the name indicates, will be run at quite a distant date. With two year olds of the whole world eligible to the first running in 1938 all indications point to a race decidedly sporting in character at my track at San Bruno.

Along toward the end of each year colts and fillies of sufficient class have been developed to make a contest of wide appeal to the fans. I plan to put this "baby" event on at the fall meeting, probably in the month of November. Previously the Belmont Futurity and the Pimlico Futurity will have been run and it is possible quite a number of the Eastern contestants will line up for the Tanforan Futurity. If not in 1938 then in subsequent years contention may also be furnished by youngsters from other countries.

International racing has been given a big boost by the victories of horses owned by William Woodward and other Americans in England. The effort on the Pacific Coast along international lines is directed mainly toward Australasia, where runners of more than ordinary grade are bred. The ocean certainly makes something of a barrier to California-breds racing in Australia or New Zealand or to the shipment, especially on account of the difference in seasons of the year, of "down under" gallopers to our shores; but the difficulty of the thing adds just that much of a fillip to its accomplishment.

In nearly all of the best horses on the American turf today is an Australian strain, usually through importation by James B. Haggin. When the Australian Darebin had Porter Ashe's Guenn sent to his court the produce was none other than Emma C, dam of the great Commando.

In the next few years it would not be surprising if other notable "outcrosses" for our breeding stock found their way to San Francisco, first to take part in the racing and later to go into the breeding paddock.

Such early closing events as the Tanforan Futurity are designed to encourage, above all, the development of even more durable horses than those of the present day.

SUPERVISOR WITT ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY

Albert J. Witt Jr., who for the past four years has represented the First Township on the County Board of Supervisors, today filed for re-election.

A portion of his statement is as follows:

During my term as Supervisor of the First Township, San Mateo County, which constitutes a four year period, I have to the best of my ability represented the citizens and taxpayers of San Mateo County in all matters pertaining to their best interests and welfare.

My record in the past four years reveals a background of civic accomplishments to which both my friends and myself point with pride.

My term of office having been completed, I now, therefore, come before the voters of San Mateo County this time for re-election.

It is my sincere belief that a public official's best recommendation is his background.

I make no idle promises. I offer no theories. I confine myself to facts. I offer my record of the past four years as my sole argument for re-election and I sincerely hope that it shall be my privilege to again serve the citizens of San Mateo County for the next four years as Supervisor of the First Township.

WILL SOON BE HOUSED IN OWN NEW BUILDING

Byrne Occupies Structure Recently Erected On Mission Street

Concrete evidence of the advantages of trading at home is shown in the new store building of Edward Byrne, for ten years a successful merchant of the Mission district, at 6241 Mission street, next Monday.

Byrne, for years an advocate of the policy of trading at home, has increased his business to such an extent that he was compelled to double the size of his store, and this new location, completely fitted with new fixtures and stocked with fine merchandise, is the result.

One of the features of the opening week of Byrne's new store is a complete display of the Apex line of electric appliances — cleaners, washers, irons and refrigerators, every model of the famous Apex line, of which more than two and a half million are in use.

"We are stocking and showing Apex appliances because our experience proves they give satisfaction to the owner," said Byrne, "and that's the first key to success in any mercantile business—you must have goods that satisfy the buyers. Apex appliances do this, and so we are continuing, as we have for many years, to sell and recommend them."

Byrne announced that demonstration of the famous Apex electric ironer would be held in his new store during the first week it is open—from June 22 to June 27—and invited housewives and home makers to come in and see how this amazing machine irons every item of a household laundry — shirts, ruffles, lingerie, dresses, flat goods, heavy blankets and everything.

"It also presses and steams velvet," said Byrne. "In fact, if a woman has an Apex in her house, she no longer has any excuse to even own a flat-iron. They are very easy to use, too. Some women think it's difficult to iron with an electric ironer—but they have never tried an Apex!"

CHURCH AUTHORITY PRAISES NEW DEAL

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

With the nadir of human endeavor reached in rapid outpourings about the Roosevelt policies from the opposition it is refreshing to take stock of the real meaning of those much-abused policies. We do not need, furthermore, to take the word of any member of the Roosevelt contingent itself, but learn what it is all about from well-informed, unprejudiced observers on the outside.

Especially enlightening was the address of the Right Rev. John A. Ryan at the closing session of the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems recently held in San Francisco. Dr. Ryan made the flat-footed statement that the Roosevelt administration, in the public works of the WPA and PWA, has been responsible for from 60 to 80 per cent of the economic recovery of the country.

In a keen analysis of the causes of the long-continued depression Dr. Ryan named a bad system of distribution of wealth as the chief. He said that for a long period prior to 1929 too much of the national product had been distributed in the form of profits and interest and too little in the form of wages to labor and prices to the farmer.

That was getting right to the heart of the matter. Such forthright thinking, by the way, was altogether absent at the Cleveland convention of what was once a great political party.

Dr. Ryan pointed out in his talk the unjust distribution of wealth as indicated in 1929, when the richest one-tenth of one per cent of American families received as large a share of the products of the nation as the poorest 42 per cent.

Here is some more clear thinking on the part of Dr. Ryan:

"The products could not all be sold because labor and the farmers had not been receiving sufficient income to buy as much as they wanted to buy; the receivers of large profits would not buy because they did not need more."

Here is something the most rabid opponent of the "fair play" tactics of the President cannot answer. Dr. Ryan said the innate justice of the NRA, which was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, was shown by the fact that in the period from January, 1933, to January, 1935, average weekly hours in manufacturing industries were reduced 3.7 per cent while per capita weekly earnings rose 27.6 per cent. Employment increased by one-third.

Dr. Ryan condemned unlimited saving and unlimited investment. Listen to his peroration:

"Where would we be if we were to accept the tenets of Calvin Coolidge? That is, to live frugally and spend little. Factories would close and business would stagnate because there would be little or no demand for their products."

"Paradoxically, it is the spender, the person who spends everything he gets and thus puts his money in circulation who creates a demand for the products of the country and thus increases our national prosperity."

Dr. Ryan is professor of economics at the Catholic University in Washington and is a recognized expert on the subject which he has made a life study. He rejects entirely Herbert Hoover's idea that only through what is termed ordered liberty, through equal opportunity to the individual, can progress come. He agrees with President Roosevelt that by reason of the vast aggregation of wealth in a few hands and present day conditions generally equality of opportunity does not exist.

In this connection the ironical statement of Professor Carl Becker is to the point. Becker said the law gives the rich and poor the same liberty to spend, to save, to accumulate property—and to sleep under bridges.

All liberals are agreed that the American Liberty League, the National Association of Manufacturers and other organizations slinging mud at President Roosevelt do not want legislation to protect labor and prevent any effective restraints on the anti-social practices of "organized greed."

THOMPSON HAS HAT IN RING

More than 20 years ago Dr. C. V. Thompson, Pescadero, formerly of Burlingame, began his service to San Mateo County as a member of the Board of Supervisors.

Last week in Redwood City he again filed his candidacy for Supervisor, to represent the coastside, which district he served for many years in that capacity. Dr. Thompson listed among his sponsors prominent residents from every section of the county.

Dr. Thompson began his supervisory duties as a coastside representative when that area had two members on the county board. In 1931 he moved to Burlingame, voluntarily settling a long court battle on Burlingame's part for a representative on the board from a new district to include that city and Millbrae. When Dr. Thompson came over to represent Burlingame and Millbrae, the coastside, where he has been a property owner for many years, was consolidated into one district.

In 1935 he relinquished his post on the board and returned to his coastside home, where he has resided for the past year and a half. Friends throughout the county prevailed upon Dr. Thompson this year to again seek a seat on the county board as the coastside representative. In filing his nomination papers, Dr. Thompson said he had decided to go, only after careful consideration, following the insistence of his friends.

Friends of Dr. Thompson pointed out that Redwood City bickerings and rapid increase in county governmental costs are forcing adverse publicity upon the county and needless burdens upon the taxpayers. They declared that Dr. Thompson's experience in and wide knowledge of county governmental affairs are sorely needed now in the courthouse.

In filing his candidacy Dr. Thompson said he is not affiliated with any other candidate, nor ticket of candidates. He declared he seeks the office as an independent, free from any alliances and bound by no political promises.

CEYLON MISSIONARY IN CHURCH MEETING

COMBINED FIRE DRILL FRUITFUL

Monday night a combination drill by Stations Nos. 4, 5 and 6 was held, and was pronounced successful by all members of the department who took part.

The captains of each station were given sealed envelopes prepared by Chief Chesney and Assistant Chief Bodien, which were not to be opened until 8 p. m. sharp.

The scene of the supposed fire was the lumber yard and mill at the corner of School and Bruno and was threatening the rear of the business houses facing on Mission street.

Station No. 6, from their station on Werner street, had their first stream laid in three minutes and the second one two minutes later. Station No. 4, coming from their quarters, had number one stream laid in seven minutes and their second line in nine minutes. Station No. 5, coming from Bellevue quarters, had their two streams on in eleven and fourteen minutes.

Bringing apparatus from the greatest distance in the city as second alarm companies, showing fire and surroundings covered by six streams in less than fifteen minutes. After hose had been replaced in the apparatus, Assistant Chief Silicani put each station through a drill with the 40 foot extension ladder. The three stations are improving each time they hold this ladder drill.

After the drill the members of the three stations were invited to station No. 6 quarters, where a splendid feed of corned beef and cabbage and what goes with it had been prepared by Deputy Sheriff George Krehl, assisted by Deputy Marshal Jack Callan.

HATCH HAS FILED AS CANDIDATE FOR SUPERVISOR POST

ALVIN S. HATCH

Alvin S. Hatch, Half Moon Bay business man, announced Tuesday that he will go before the voters of San Mateo County, August 25, as a candidate for the office of supervisor from the Fourth (Coastside) township. The pioneer Coastside civic leader enters the county political scene for the first time after a career of public service which, his supporters point out, has made him thoroughly familiar with the county problems he will face as supervisor.

"My father, Rufus Hatch, settled in Half Moon Bay in 1855, when this county was part and parcel of San Francisco County," Hatch said today.

"If this county is to maintain its independence, it must restore the confidence of the people in the county government at Redwood City. If elected I will do all in my power to create that confidence by square dealing, independent action and outspoken honesty in county affairs. I pledge myself to the majority and not to any minority group and I enter this campaign strictly independent and not obligated to any faction."

Hatch, who was born in Half Moon Bay, and who has been in business there for more than 30 years, served on the board of freeholders which drafted the charter, and at various times on the county planning commission and county recreation commission. He was a member of the committee that selected the Memorial Park site and has served for ten years as a Half Moon Bay school trustee.

Hatch declared himself for a business-like, economical administration of county affairs, and for elimination of the "spoils system" in county appointments, so that persons with ability may be employed by the county to carry on their respective duties free from coercion.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, June 21, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heaven." (Prov. 3: 19). Other Bible citations will include: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. . . . Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear" (Hebr. 11: 1, 3).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The universe, like man, is to be interpreted by Science from its divine Principle, God, and then it can be understood; but when explained on the basis of physical sense and represented as subject to growth, maturity, and decay, the universe, like man, is, and must continue to be, an enigma" (p. 124).

Floral aromas that might well perfume the gardens of Samarkand, Cairo, Tokio, or any of the other far-flung lands of floral loveliness are one of the exquisite delights of visitors to the California Pacific International Exposition.

EXPERIENCED HOUSEWIFE CLUB

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Macaroni can be used in a great variety of ways, as well as other members of its family. The smallest sized tubes are called vermicelli and the medium sized tubes are spaghetti. Noodles, too, belong to this species. In Italy, where this food originated, any preparation made from the flour paste are called "maccheroni."

The high percentage of starch in macaroni makes it a good substitute for potatoes.

In the manufacture of macaroni and its allied products the wheat is first ground into a meal, from which the bran is then removed. The meal is then mixed with hot water and worked into a dough. The dough tubes of macaroni products are formed in a steel cylinder with perforations of the desired size, the dough being forced through the holes by steam pressure. As the cylindrical pieces leave the machine they are cut into strips and then dried.

In Italy, the pieces of dough are dried in the open. In America the tubes are dried indoors on reels.

Following is a tamale noodle recipe large enough to serve twelve people.

Mrs. H. Elmers of 137 Miriam street, telephone Delaware 1853, says it is good, that is why she sent in the recipe, which reads as follows:

TAMALE NOODLES

Boil two packages of noodles, drain, add one onion cooked in olive oil, then add two cans tomato sauce, one can of corn, one can mushrooms, one small bottle of olive oil (or a can of minced olives), one cup of cheese, adding one-half of cheese to the noodles and sprinkle the rest on top. Bake about 45 minutes. Serves twelve.

Following is a Tomato Soup Cake recipe, from "The Farmer's Wife": One-half cup shortening; 1 cup sugar; 1 can Campbell's Tomato soup; one-fourth cup cold water, which is first used to rinse tomato soup can. 1 teaspoon soda; 2 teaspoons (level) baking powder; 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg; 1 cup chopped raisins; 1 cup nuts.

Bake as a loaf cake in a 325 to 350 degree oven for forty or fifty minutes. No eggs are used in this cake.

Iceing—1 package of Philadelphia cream cheese, 1 cup powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

"Pat—" he began, still standing. "I've stumbled on something."
"So I gathered," she observed. "And I assume that it has to do with your pet murder."
"It has to do with your father."
She smiled.
"I suppose you've discovered that he killed Kelly."
"I've discovered that he called on Kelly that night."
"Wonderful!" Pat mocked. "Who told you that?"
"The taxi-man who drove him down town."

Barry related his adventure with the errand medic.
Pat listened almost indifferently.
"It was sheer chance," Barry concluded. "I hadn't any idea of implicating your father. But now he is implicated. You must see that."
"I don't—unless you insist on dragging him into it."
"I insist on nothing, Pat—except clearing an innocent man."
"At the expense of one equally innocent?"

"What does your father stand to lose by telling the truth? We know now that Kelly was alive when Rogers left the house. I'm just as sure that he was alive when the Judge left. But he must have been killed soon afterward. We've got to find out who killed him."
"Why?"

"Because now we've two men to clear."
"If my father saw Kelly after the boy left—"

"That clears Rogers."
"And puts it up to my father."
"Your father didn't kill Kelly," Barry said. "I know that, and I know why he went to that house."
"Really?"
"He went to protest against filing that Jefferson street decision."
"And then fled it."
"He had to. The pressure was too strong for him. He'd been struggling against it for weeks. In politics, even honest men have to listen to reason sometimes. Your father had to."

"How interesting!"
"In spite of the hullabaloo, he wrote the decision. And, that day, came the bitterest onslaught of all. The Globe made a direct accusation. Your father was frantic. Just before midnight, he telephoned Kelly from the tobaccoist's shop, and went straight to Sixteenth street."

"He told Kelly this verdict would ruin him. Might ruin everybody. For more than an hour, he plead and argued. No use. Kelly was adamant. Your father gave up at two o'clock, left Kelly—alive—and filed his decision next morning, before anyone knew that Kelly was no longer alive. That's the truth, isn't it?"

"So plausible that telling it publicly would probably end my father's career."
"And so?"
"And so I think we'd better forget it."

"You mean that, to continue your father's career, you'd let this boy go to the gallows?"

"Of course, I don't."
She turned to him, the hardness gone out of her voice.

"There's no chance of that, and you know it."
"There's always a chance."

"We'll face that when we come to it."
"We've got to face it now, Pat."
"Why?" she plead. And then, passionately: "What right have you to demand that we do anything? You don't even know this boy."

"I do."
"Since last—"

"And you know him. He's the real John Clarke Ridder."
That gave her pause.

"Whoever he is, he's got a wife and a baby. I can't risk his life to save you, or myself."

"If he's convicted—" Pat began.
"I won't have him go through that. If the Judge doesn't tell the truth now, I will."

Pat's mouth became a straight, hard line.
"And who'll believe you?" she asked.

"I can prove—"

"Who'll take the word of a bribed taxi-driver and a branded adventurer?"

"Listen, Pat—"

"You listen. I've warned you to stop prying into our affairs. You went right on. And now you—the scum of the earth—"

She was losing her head.
"Now you come into my house with a story vilifying my father and threaten to tell it if we don't. My reply to that is: Go ahead! And, an hour after you do, you'll be arrested for robbing the mails!"

They stood facing each other.
"That letter you opened before Willets—the letter with the hundred dollar bill—that wasn't addressed to Barry Gilbert, was it?"

"No."
Pat crossed the room.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but you asked for it."
"I did, but I can't take your answer. I can't because—God help me, Pat—I'm in love with you."

She gave no sign of hearing.
"I'm an adventurer," he went on, "and you're a lady. The real test I ever met. That's why you can't do this."

No answer.
"I couldn't," Barry continued, "and I'm a fake gentleman. I wanted to. I wanted to drop the whole business. I told Willets that after you'd warned me last Friday. And Willets said, 'That isn't done. A gentleman's got certain responsibilities.' He has. That's a tradition stronger than we are."

Pat turned, at last.
"This is funny," she said. "You—"
"It is funny," he cut her short. "I'd like to behave like a loafer, and I can't. I'm willing to go to jail to save this boy—and I'm the scum of the earth. You're a lady. How about you?"

"If it were only me—" she broke.
"Your father's a gentleman. How about him?"

Before she could reply, the double doors opened.

Judge Hambidge was standing there—erect and soldier-like.

"Mr. Gilbert's right, Pat," he said. "I release you from your promise to me. I can't go through with it. I'm too tired, and full of self-loathing."

He turned squarely to Barry.
"You're right about everything. About my going to Kelly that night, and the reason I went. He let me in himself. We quarreled violently. So violently that he took a revolver out of his desk drawer and kept it in his hand. Then I walked out of the house. But you were wrong about just one thing, Mr. Gilbert. I left the house at two o'clock, but, when I left it, Kelly wasn't alive."

CHAPTER VII

They were a curiously inert little group for a minute or two after the revelation.

It was like a play, Barry thought; curtain down on a climax, and the actors relaxing until it should rise again for the next scene.

After a time, Barry crossed the room to the pair.

Pat turned on him.

"Well, now you know," she said.

"You know about us, but remember we know about you, too."

She was herself again; hard and defiant.

Ignoring her, for the moment, Barry asked the Judge, "Do you want to tell me what happened?"

"I wrote my opinion in the Jefferson street proceedings, and then, again as you say, I couldn't go through with it. I'd never done a crooked thing in my life. I don't know how I ever made that speech at the Astor. The instant it was finished, I telephoned Kelly. 'You'd better come down and talk it over,' he said.

"Of course, it would have been fatal for anyone to learn of that meeting. That's why I got out of the taxi at Twenty-third street. As I told you, Kelly admitted me himself. He was drunk, and in a bad temper. 'What's the matter with you?' he asked, when we'd gone into the drawing room. 'White-livered? Here; take a drink, and forget it.'"

"There was a bottle on the table, and two glasses. Both of 'em had been used, but he half-filled them, and gave me one. I needed it, but I can't drink Scotch—never could. I told Kelly so, and he blazed out at me. 'You're too good to drink with me—is that it?'"

"No," I answered; "that's not it. But I can't hand down that decision. I simply can't, Mr. Kelly. It's rotten, and everyone knows it. I've got the cursed thing in my pocket, and—"

"And I've got something in my pocket," he shouted—

"Father!" Pat intervened.

"For over an hour, I plead and argued. And Kelly kept drinking, and getting uglier. He was a big man, with a bull neck, and huge hands. At last, he said, 'Shut your damned mouth, and get out of here!'"

"I said, 'I'm not going.'"

"No?" he sneered, and got up from his chair. He stumbled across the room to a great, old-fashioned desk, and got a revolver. 'Now, beat it,' he yelled, 'and damned quick!'"

"All right," I said, "but I won't file that decision."

"I walked into the hall, and Kelly stood, leaning against the door, with the pistol in his hand, so furious that I half expected him to shoot before I could get my hat. You think you can scare me," he shouted. "You and The Globe. You think you got something on me. Witnesses. Squealers."

Well, I know how to take care of them, by God! Beat it! And, if that decision ain't filed by noon today, I'll—"

Again, Pat said, "Father!"
"I know," Hambidge interrupted himself.

Pat's admonition had come just in time, Barry thought. The Judge had risen, tense, and so excited that he seemed on the verge of collapse.

"And that was that," Barry calmed him.

"Not quite," Judge Hambidge continued, but in a lower tone. "When I got to the bottom of the steps—the stone steps, I mean—I stood thinking. If I left that way, there was no telling what Kelly might do. 'I've got to go through,' I thought. 'It's ruin either way, but, if I obey orders, ruin only for me. I'd better give in.' I couldn't make up my mind, though. I kept looking back, half decided. And, suddenly, a queer thing happened. The front door swung open."

The Judge mopped his hands again.
"I'd shut it carefully," he resumed, "but there it was, wide, almost like an invitation. I walked into the hall. The glass doors to the drawing room were closed, but I could see the light through them. When I put my hand on the knob, the lights went out. I turned the knob, and pushed, but the door wouldn't open. Not latched—it was as if someone was holding it."

"Kelly," I thought. "He won't let me in. I've got to act quick now." Almost in a daze, I wandered up to the avenue. At nine o'clock, I gave the decision to my clerk, and told him to file it immediately. A few hours later, I learned that Kelly was dead. The papers said his body was found stretched across that door to the hall. I knew then it was there when I left the house, and that was why I couldn't open the door."

Pat said, "Are you satisfied?"
"Are you?" Barry asked. "Or would you rather that I tried to find who killed Kelly?"

"What does it matter—" Pat began, hotly.

"I think Mr. Gilbert's answer that question," the Judge interrupted. "We've got to clear young Ridder. At any cost, Pat, we've got to clear him." "Mr. Gilbert's our friend," her father went on. "He says so, and I believe him."

"What do you want to know, Mr. Gilbert?"

"How long did you stand at the foot of the steps before that door swung open?"

"Five minutes. Maybe, a little more."

"Do you think someone opened it? Someone who, then, went in to Kelly?"

"You mean, the murderer?" Barry nodded.

"No. That's the last thing he would have done. The door probably didn't latch when I closed it."

"While you were in the house, did you see anyone but Kelly?"

"No. We were shut in together."

"Did you hear anyone?"

"Since you mention it, once I did think I heard the front door close. I may have imagined it, but now I remember Kelly asked, 'Who's that in the hall?' It was about half an hour after we went into the drawing room, and I looked out, but there wasn't anyone."

"He—or she—may have gone into the dining room," Barry said. "Whoever killed Kelly came out of the dining room; I'm certain of that."

"Why?"

"Because the drink Kelly offered you was Scotch whiskey. Was there anything else in the room?"

"If there had been, I'd've asked for it."

"Exactly. And the weapon that crushed Kelly's skull was a cutglass decanter containing rye whiskey."

"In the five minutes you were standing on the pavement," Barry reasoned, "someone came out of that dining room, with that decanter, and struck Kelly. There was no time for a quarrel. That man—or that woman—knew what he—or she—was going to do."

"Why do you say 'she'?" Pat asked.

"This wasn't a woman's crime."

"It's not a criminal's crime, either," Barry answered. "A criminal would have brought the weapon, and it wouldn't've been a cut-glass decanter. A criminal might have worn gloves, to prevent leaving finger-prints. But, since this wasn't a criminal, the fact that there were no finger prints suggests that the murderer just happened to be wearing gloves."

"And?" Pat inquired, tensely.

"And men don't often wear gloves on a warm night. Women do. It was a warm night."

"It was very warm," the Judge said.

"You are a shrewd young man," the girl glibed at him. "But your assumptions are ridiculous. Gloves! Anyone might have worn 'em. Anyone might remember the risk of leaving finger-prints, and wipe them off a bottle with a handkerchief. Anyone might've come in through an unlatched door—any time after my father left."

"But," Barry objected, "Kelly was dead then."

"How do you know that? How do we know my father wasn't right when he thought Kelly was keeping him out? All your conjectures lead nowhere, Mr. Gilbert. The only discovery you've made is that father saw Kelly after young Ridder did. And, as I told you, that's merely implicating one innocent man instead of another."

"And you—"

"Naturally, it's the second innocent man I care about. Especially since his innocence—of murder—wouldn't keep your disclosures from disgracing him."
